

CHAPTER NO. 62

SENATE BILL NO. 613

By Trail

Substituted for: House Bill No. 742

By Fitzhugh, McMillan, Hood, West

AN ACT to amend Tennessee Code Annotated, Title 47, Chapter 3 and Title 47, Chapter 4, relative to negotiable instruments and bank deposits and collections.

WHEREAS, a type of negotiable instrument known as a "demand draft," which is termed "payee-initiated demand draft" for clarity purposes in this legislation, is being used more frequently in consumer transactions; and

WHEREAS, these payee-initiated demand drafts are most often initiated by telemarketers who obtain a customer's bank name and account number; and

WHEREAS, these payee-initiated demand drafts are initiated without the customer's actual signature and only a notation of "authorized by customer" or "signature on file"; and

WHEREAS, these payee-initiated demand drafts are often disputed by the customers and cause risk of loss both by the customer and the customer's depository bank; and

WHEREAS, traditional processing rules of the Uniform Commercial Code do not provide adequate remedies to return such items if they are disputed; and

WHEREAS, more than ten states (including California, Colorado, Oregon, Texas and West Virginia) have adopted non-uniform provisions to the UCC to address these problems and the National Commissioners on Uniform Laws have proposed no adequate solution to this problem; and

WHEREAS, Tennessee believes that it is in the best interest of its citizens and depositories to adopt a non-uniform provision of the UCC similar to action taken by more than ten states and with the intent that Tennessee's provision, while not identical in language, should benefit from the reciprocal treatment contemplated among the states; and
